[Ofrece interesantes reflexiones sobre el efecto del desarrollo de la enseñanza universitaria en la práctica de los fotógrafos y en la legitimación de la fotografía como arte. Se destaca la poderosa influencia del modelo y la personalidad de Moholy-Nagy. En pp. 14-15: "Between 1964 y 1967 the number of colleges and universities that offered at least one course in photography increased from 268 to 440. In the years between 1966 and 1970 the number of students studying photography or cinematography at the University of Illinois (Champaign-Urbana) increased from 132 to 4.175 -a growth of over three thousand percent in four years."].
